LITTLE WILLOW WEEKLY NEWS

Alice Hansen Willow corrs.

The teachers and pupils of the District No. 4 school gave a program for the parents and neighbors Friday evening. Afterwards the children enjoyed gifts that were on the tree and treats were passed to all present.

Well another Thanksgiving day has come and gone, this one for us was spent a little better than the last one, so we have that to be thankful for. I only hope the next one can be spent at home. Just a year ago on Thanksgiving day we were in the middle of the Gilberts operation, eating K-rations because we had been to sea for six days. I can't tell you where we are now but I'll read your names. You will know that we are not with the Seventh Fleet as all the ships in that group were named "The South Pacific" so read Nov. 6 issue of the paper and you will know the story. The other day one of our boys was writing to his gal and telling her to ask where he was. He did not know himself.

We have seen a great many things during the past few months that must wait for the time to be told. You have read of the sinking of the U.S. S. Emmett. That made us feel very sad as we have operated with her so much. She had a splendid crew of boys and their pilots were second to none. Time and again over our public address system it was a comfort to hear "Princeton fighters have just splashed two bogies." The word will come no more, but we do know that on the fateful day when we could not assist them, a great many men heard echoes in the Court of Heaven the word from the Supreme Commander in Chief: "Stand by to receive Princeton fighters aboard." From Him, we know, they received

Sailor Writes Of South Pacific

George Flock, brother of Mrs. R. N. Broderick and a prisoner writes interestingly in the Navy in wartime, as follows:

heard echoes in the Court of Heaven the word from the Supreme Commander in Chief: "Stand by to receive Princeton fighters aboard." From Him, we know, they received a welcome and a highly merited "Well done."

Well Christmas is just around the corner. I remember how nice it was spent here and I hope it will be a little more pleasant this year. Perhaps in another year we will still be here. In reading the little episode at a time in our sick bay, I had been lying back in my bunk and listening to him talk. One of the chaplains kept him company and listened as he whispered some stories. I am a fighting man and am happy to have done my part. And the time being we are fighting men and make no our jobs easier. It means separation from our loved ones. We hope and pray another year will bring us home and that we can find in person say to you what we most want to tell the man. A Happy Christmas and a Bright Year."

Sgt. John Richards, who is on the U. S. S. Hospital ship "Majestic" writes his parents from New Guinea:

Mrs. Robert Norwell spent Christmas day at the home of Mrs. Mae Gilmore. Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hengeler and family.

From Mr. and Mrs. John D. Gilmore and son, of Vale,

The happy result of infinite skill, patient care and 100 years of distilling experience
