FOUR OUT OF FIVE
SNAKE RIVER VALLEY FARMS
USE Electricity!

Electricity serves over twenty-thousand farms on the Idaho Power system. With help hard to get, and the nation's need for farm produce greater than ever before in history, electricity is doing more and bigger jobs for farmers. Here are just a few of the many services electricity is rendering on our farms every day. All of them can be utilized by an electrified farm. How many are You using?

Reddy Kilowatt Can Help You Step Up Your Production and Profits

CHICK BROODER

Fire-free, fumeless, SAFE! The electric chick brooder saves more chicks and saves 20 to 30 per cent in labor. Some models are still available at your farm equipment store. If you can't buy one—build one. It's easy!

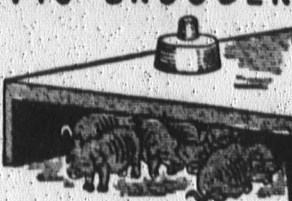

POULTRY HOUSE LIGHTING

Poultry authorities agree that laying hens need at least 13 hours of light per day for maximum production of eggs. You can equip your poultry house with electric lights now. See your electric dealer.

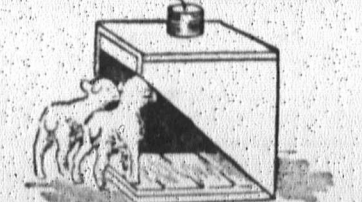

HOME-MADE

PIG BROODER

Little pigs need the protection and warmth of a brooder during the first 10 days to two weeks of their lives. They're easy to build—give your pigs this sensible protection.

LAMB BROODER

Case histories show that baby lamb deaths are reduced 97% by immediately placing new-born lambs in a temperature-controlled brooder. Inexpensive and simple to make. Heat is supplied either by electric light, heater or a heating element.

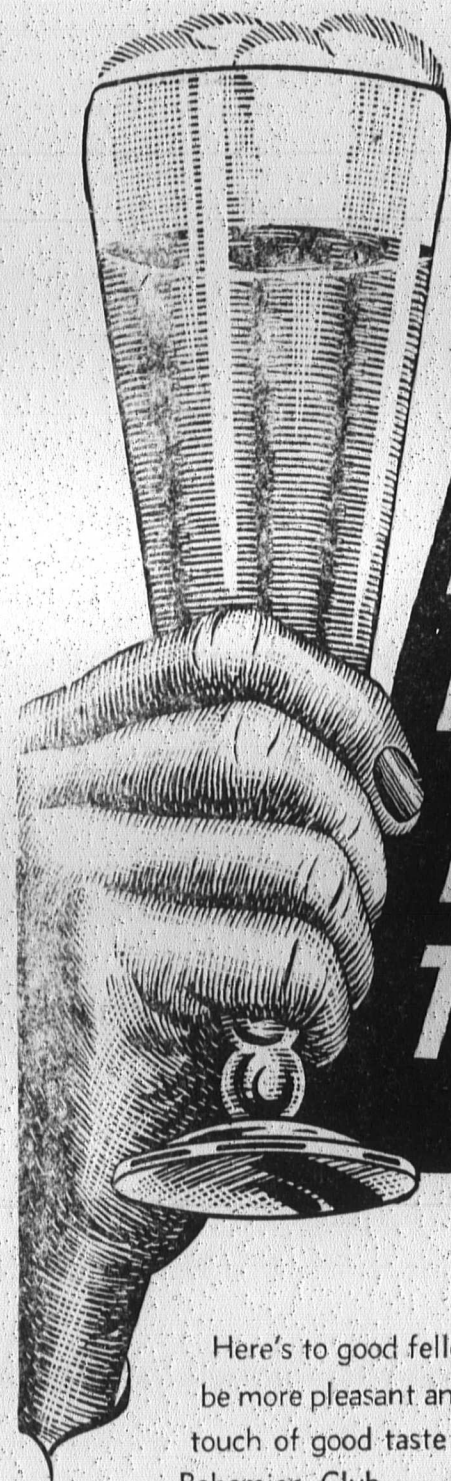

WATER SYSTEM

A fine investment for every farm, an electric water system will pay for itself in from 6 to 12 months in labor costs alone. It will increase beef and butter-fat production from 10 to 25%, and warm water for poultry often increases egg production 12 to 15%. And of course—for laundry, bath and farm kitchen—THERE'S NO SUBSTITUTE FOR RUNNING WATER!

Plans and specifications on all equipment mentioned in this advertisement may be secured from the University of Idaho Extension Service, Boise, Idaho, from your county agent or from any Idaho Power Company office without cost.
