ONCE A NAZI SHRINE—View of a public square in the ancient German city of Nurnberg after its capture by American troops. At the right may be seen the statue of Albrecht Durer, famous medieval painter and engraver, which escaped Allied air attacks. Nurnberg in recent years was the center of important munitions industries which were destroyed by Allied bombing operations. It is estimated that more than 22,000 tons of explosives were dropped on the city's airfields, railroads and industrial targets.
